

The art of preparing the field for collaboration that matters

2.5 day training
13-15 February 2019
Brisbane, Australia

- HOW DO WE CREATE THE CONDITIONS FOR GENERATIVE COLLABORATION?
- HOW DO WE SUPPORT INDIVIDUALS AND TEAMS TO ORGANISE AND DO THEIR BEST WORK TOGETHER?

So many situations in our lives demand that we collaborate, and do it well. Never before have our collective efforts been so needed or the outcomes so critical.

While each of us have a responsibility to develop our individual skills and capacities, our visions of the future will only be realised through teams, organisations, communities and societies. It's time to look behind the scenes at the nature of organising and collaborating.

Groundwork is both a personal and collective practice for strengthening collaboration which can be integrated and applied to any aspect of life. The purpose of this 2.5-day Groundwork training is to build our individual and collective capacities to collaborate more effectively and with more powerful results. We will explore and deepen the elements of Groundwork practice through a framework called the Foundations of Powerful Collaboration.

We will apply this to projects and initiatives that participants are already working with. Using this framework we will explore principles, practices and tools that can support us in practising Groundwork more consciously.

"Just as every good farmer focuses all his attention on sustaining and enhancing the quality of the soil, every good organisational leader focuses all her attention on sustaining and enhancing the quality of the social field that she is responsible for."

Otto Scharmer

What will you get out of the training?

You will be introduced to the core elements of Groundwork practice. In particular, the training will explore:

- How do we build a solid foundation for powerful collaboration?
- How could we practice more harmonious ways of organising ourselves, each other and the work that matters?
- How do we invite others to work with us in an authentic and artful way?
- How do we nurture inspired and connected teams committed to creating meaningful impact?
- How do we create structures that reflect and support the deeper need and purpose we are serving?
- Where has this worked before, and what are good stories of application that can inspire and strengthen our work?

Who should come?

This training is designed for people working in teams that are interested in working more with process, participation and engagement. We encourage teams to attend together and to bring a concrete project which can be used as a focus for the practice.

Groundwork is for you, if you:

- Have an idea or goal you want to achieve, or project to work on
- Work within Government or Business in urban or rural environments
- Work or volunteer with nonprofit or grassroots organisations
- Serve on a Board of Directors
- Work with Social Enterprise
- Work in multi-stakeholder or cross-sector collaborations
- Are an Entrepreneur or Intrapreneur
- Need to grow connections with people with similar questions

Your hosts

James Ede is a Learning Host and partner in Status Flow, a consultancy offering process design, facilitation and capacity building for organisations within the fields of leadership, learning, communication and collaboration. James is a co-founder of Groundwork. His interest stems from his experience of working with teams and from collaborating to host events, conferences and conversations that matter. James lives with his partner Anne and their daughters in Copenhagen, Denmark, and is often in Australia visiting family.

Mel Geltch is a host of events that matter, designer and guide for organisational transformation, and a member of Campfire Coop, a self-organising collaborative organisation using groundwork as an operating system. She is based in Brisbane.

Moze (Michelle) Crozier is another Brisbane-based member of Campfire Coop. She believes meaningful conversations and good process are the keys to unlocking wise action for a more creative, curious, and compassionate world.

Pam Burley is passionate about finding new ways of working in organisations. She is also a member of Campfire Coop, based in Warwick in south-west Queensland.

Tracy Adams is an ecologist, sustainability scientist and NVC practitioner based on the Sunshine Coast of Queensland.
